Preface

The need for a cumulative fifteen year index for the Religious Studies Review arose during an editorial officers meeting at Whittier College in the summer of 1987. We were to learn, in the intervening months, that ideas conceived in the comfort of a summer retreat are harmless enough until the time arrives for their implementation. As with most other projects of this sort, the "projected time to completion" was grossly underestimated. The complexity was much greater than we anticipated. Even with the aid of the computer the shear amount of material to be manipulated was overwhelming. The complexity and volume of the booknotes underscored in a quantifiable way what many of us have suspected for some time: Religious Studies Review is the dominant scholarly journal in the field for opinion on new books.

The entries are divided into the usual categories: review essays (pp. 1–7) and book notes (pp. 9–202). Since the pagination of each volume year of RSR is continuous, the volume number only precedes the beginning page number for each entry (except in the case of volume 2 in which each issue was begun again on page 1; therefore, references to volume 2 include volume and number, i.e., 2/2:36).

All alpha sorting was accomplished by the computer, i.e., the "Mc"s are treated as "Mac"s and are found in the "M"s where they fall; no distinction is made between "van der" and "Vander," etc.

The Index was designed and typeset at Mercer University Press. Appreciation is expressed to Margaret Jordan Brown and to Edd Rowell for their significant labors in this project. Several students assisted with the input of the data. Especially do I acknowledge the assistance given by Endya Bentley. Irene Palmer has assisted throughout the course of this project in her usual efficient manner, and I acknowledge her contribution gladly.

I wish also to acknowledge with deep appreciation the labors of several colleagues who assisted with the enormous task of proofreading: Rollin S. Armour (Mercer University); Peter C. Hodgson (Vanderbilt University); Joe Price (Whittier College); and John Strong (Bates College). They did their work carefully and well, and I gratefully acknowledge their assistance. The contributions of these and others belie the fact that the RSR is a publication that results from a "community" effort.

Religion and Reason

Method and Theory in the Study and Interpretation of Religion

General Editor: Jacques Waardenburg, University of Lausanne

The aim of the series Religion and Reason is to be a platform for discussion of the fundamentals of empirical work and for reflection on alternative approaches in the broad field of the study of religion. The subtitle of the series, Method and Theory in the Study and Interpretation of Religion, expresses a vivid sense of intellectual concern with religion.

The series focusses on such topics as:

- methods and theories followed in different disciplines which deal with religious data
- contacts and interaction between religions
- explanatory and hermeneutical studies bearing on religion
- interpretation and judgments given within specific religious traditions with regard to other religions and/or religiousness
- the place and role of particular groups (e. g. women), classes (e. g. workers), elites (e. g. theologians) within specific religious traditions

THE SYNOPTIC PROBLEM

A Bibliography, 1716–1988

compiled and edited by THOMAS R. W. LONGSTAFF and PAGE A. THOMAS

"[This bibliography] lists approximately 2000 books and articles written on the Synoptic Problem beginning with Jean Le-Clerc's 1716 Historia ecclesiastica through forthcoming publications of 1989. Full bibliographical details for each item are given in the first part of the volume where items are listed alphabetically by author. In the case of books, all editions and all translations are given; reviews of books are also noted and, where feasible, OCLC numbers for books are provided. The second part of the book is a chronological listing (1716 on) of the items given in the first part. The third part of the book is a keyword index; this is greatly detailed and, for all practical purposes, gives total access to the contents of the 2000 items included in the book. This is an excellent and outstanding piece of work, a necessary tool for all future work on the Synoptic Problem."

AN EXEGETICAL BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE NEW TESTAMENT

edited by GÜNTER WAGNER

"Its greatest value is the indexing of material treated within books and articles, a type of breakdown unavailable in the standard bibliographies." —Review and Expositor

"It is hard to picture dissertations being written without Wagner at hand. Sermon writers should certainly put this book to work as well." —Christian Century

THE ORDER OF THE SYNOPTICS

Why Three Synoptic Gospels?

BERNARD ORCHARD and HAROLD RILEY

"[This book] is a forceful reminder that the Synoptic problem has not been solved. It can be recommended as a clear presentation of the two gospel hypothesis and as an excellent summary of the patristic evidence." —Catholic Biblical Quarterly

"The publication of this volume signals the cresting of what can only be called a sea change in modern exegesis. . . . Dom Bernard Orchard, Benedictine, and Harold Riley, Anglican priest, have co-produced a volume which will command response and will challenge the most untouchable 'assured result' of modern criticism." —Reflections. . .

THE CROSS AND THE SPIRIT

A Study in the Argument and Theology of Galatians

Charles H. Cosgrove

"Cosgrove has provided us with a consistently thoughtful and carefully researched analysis of an issue given too little attention in contemporary Pauline studies: The relationship between the church's glorious life in the Spirit and its painful participation in Christ's crucifixion. Both in Paul's time and in our own, the liberation of those caught in the web of sin—that is to say, the liberation of all human beings—involves the recognition that, in his foolish wisdom, God has inextricably bound the gift of the Spirit to the suffering of the cross. Cosgrove's study of this bond is an important step forward, not only for Pauline research, but also for the task of the church today."

THE GOSPEL OF MATTHEW ACCORDING TO A PRIMITIVE HEBREW TEXT

George Howard

"Howard offers a lucid study of an ancient Hebrew text of Matthew. . . . The volume is essential to any academic library with a strong biblical studies collection and commends itself to a range of readers including rabbinists, biblical scholars, students of Jewish Christianity, church historians, and educated laity." —Choice

William Richard Stegner

"A highly readable and well-documented book that should be in the libraries of all church historians and students of the foreign missionary movement." — RUTH A. TUCKER
International Bulletin of Missionary Research

"Fascinating . . . . The author sensitively describes the personal problems women agents faced in daily life and explains how their efforts were interwoven with international social and political developments, including changing cultural perceptions of women's role."
— LIBRARY JOURNAL

"The next time a woman student inquires about 'role models' send her herewith to EMISSARIES. Scholars will be debating the issues raised here with new and reliable information, for a long time to come."
— JOURNAL OF THE AMERICAN ACADEMY OF RELIGION

Religion and Society

General Editors: Luther H. Martin, The University of Vermont
Jacques Waardenburg, University of Lausanne

The series Religion and Society publishes studies of religions in their socio-cultural context. Drawing upon the orientations of both the humanities and the social sciences (sciences humaines), the series includes studies of religious systems, past as well as contemporary, Third World, and Eastern as well as Western.

The series focusses on such topics as:
- religious institutions, organizations, and movements
- the religious situation in various countries or regions of the world
- interactions between different religious systems within a common context
- relations between religion and politics, such as emancipatory movements and revival of indigenous religions
- religion as the ideology of political and economic change
- problems of religious continuity and change
- religion and social and mentalité history, such as traditions of popular religious practices
- women's role in religion and women's religions
- religion, language and literature.

Recent and forthcoming books published in the series Religion and Society:

Walter E. A. van Beek (Editor):	The Quest for Purity: Dynamics of Puritan Movements
Garry Trompf (Editor):	Cargo Cults and Millenarian Movements: Transoceanic Comparisons of New Religious Movements
Jacob K. Olupona and Sulayman S. Nyang (Editors):	Religious Plurality in Africa
Lauri Honko (Editor):	Religion, Myth, and Folklore in the World's Epics

Although exclusively theoretical studies of religion are published by the parallel series, Religion and Reason, it is expected that proposals submitted for the series Religion and Society be theoretically and methodologically informed.
Manuscripts to be considered for publication in Religion and Society should be sent in triplicate by registered mail to one of the following addresses:
